Dealer Comments

The latest Ranger Raptor is about as far removed from the standard truck as it's possible to get. It has a broad range of talents, with the different drive modes helping it to deliver comfort, performance and off-road ability in an impressive all-round package.

The original Ranger Raptor had a 2.0-litre twin-turbodiesel, and Ford has now introduced to the current version. Rather than use the new 3.0-litre V6 that's available in the latest Ranger, it's another 2.0 litre, and as with the standard truck, it comes with 207bhp when equipped with Ford's 10-speed automatic gearbox.
